Fidelity National Information Services Retains #1 Ranking in FinTech 100

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. – (November 13, 2008) – For the third consecutive year, Fidelity National Information Services, Inc. (FIS), a global leader in processing and technology solutions for financial institutions, has been ranked the number-one banking technology provider in the world according to the annual FinTech 100 listing.

The FinTech 100, a yearly compilation of top technology vendors by American Banker and the research firm Financial Insights, has also named FIS the world's number-two overall technology provider to the financial industry, which includes the banking, insurance and capital markets sectors. The ranking of vendors is categorized and evaluated based on fiscal year-end revenue and the percentage of revenues attributed to financial services. American Banker and Financial Insights publish a comprehensive ranking of the hardware, software and service providers within the financial services industry each year.

“We are extremely pleased to once again be recognized as the world's number-one provider of technology to the banking sector,” said Lee Kennedy, chief executive officer, Fidelity National Information Services. “In this highly competitive global market, we realize our success is a direct reflection of the success of our clients, and our ability to achieve the top ranking and remain there year after year is a testament to the leadership and strength that so many financial institutions around the world find in our products and services.”
